MAT - 2017

Two Days Workshop on Microwave & Antenna Technology

Held during 31st March to 1st April 2017

Organized by the Department of Electronics & Communication
Engineering

In association with IEEE AP/ MTT Kolkata Chapter

Siliguri Institute of Technology (Under Techno India Group)
Sukna, Siliguri, Darjeeling

Preface

The Department of Electronics & Communication Engineering of Siliguri Institute of Technology has organized a "TWO DAYS WORKSHOP ON Microwave and Antenna Technology (MAT-2017)" during 31st Mar-1st April, 2017, which aims at providing a platform for the exchange of information on latest findings, new ideas and technical expertise among researchers, developers, engineers, students, and practitioners working in India. The purpose of MAT 2017 is to promote research and developmental activities in Microwave & Antenna engineering.

The task for engineers made by employers, managers and also by the whole society is the fulfillment of needs of those societies by design, manufacturing and exploitations of newer and newer products fulfilling higher requirements making easier everyday life, work and many other expectations. It is expected that this workshop will facilitate to fulfill these requirements and satisfy the expectations.

The socio-economic scenario of the engineering students is found to be propelled by industries which are not very relevant with their course of study. Therefore, there is mis-utilization of the human resource. But if they sustain in their relevant field of study, they can contribute some valuable philosophies to their respective domains. Hence, the other perspective of this platform is to induct the students either directly or indirectly to the research and developmental environment.

Our special thanks to the Techno India Group Management for providing financial assistance to organize this conference.

We place our gratitude to the management, faculty and students whose constant support has encouraged us at every stage of this great task.

Conducting such a programme is really challenging because of its geographical location, however with the heartfelt support from the IEEE AP/MTT Kolkata Chapter, advisory committee, head office, local office and all other well wishers we have the spirit to conduct such workshop.

Workshop

Microwave as well as antenna engineering has been increasingly adopted in many diverse applications such as radio astronomy, long-distance communications, space navigation, radar systems, medical equipments as well as missile electronic systems. As a result of the accelerating rate of growth of microwave and antenna technology in research and industry sectors; students, teachers and practicing engineers in these area are faced with the need to understand various theoretical and experimental aspects of design and analysis of microwave circuits, antennas and simulation techniques, as well as their applications. The principal objective of this workshop was to train, educate and appraise students, research scholars and professionals from academic institutes, industries and other sectors in the field of microwave and antenna engineering. The workshop focused upon exploring new avenues with latest advances in the field of microwave and antenna technology through lectures of distinguished and eminent scientists and researchers.
